The agents said that they entered the place about midnight and told Cæsar Bozzo of 354 West Fifty-sixth street, captain of the waiters, that they were actors just off the road after a long trip. Reager volunteerd to enliven the night and went on the Gance floor and did an imitation of Frisco, the jazz dancer, which the agents said earned great applause from the diners.

This got the agents on good terms with the waiters, and they say that Bozzo then brought them the whisky. Bozzo was arrested, as were Andrew Hendricks of 127 West Sixty-fourth street, a waiter, and Frank Garlascio, head waiter, of 30 West Thirty-init street. They were taken to the West Thirtieth street station charged with violating the Volstead act.

The Prohibition Department has devised a new means of protection against the Juggling of liquor permits. The plan, announced from Washington last night is aimed principally at the practice of siltering permits after they have left of ficial hands. These alterations, changing the amount of liquor called for, have made possible the illegal withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of liquor.

The words of the text stamped by the machines on the permits are diagonal, preventing the insertion by forgers of interlinear words. The amount of liquor called for, have made possible the lilegal withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of liquor.

Sent From London to Sir Joseph Duveen Here.

The loss in transmission by mail between London and New York of two emeralds owned by Sir Joseph Duveen, art dealer of this city, which he valued at $25,000, has become known through advertisements both in this country and in England.

A reward of $2,000 was offered in this city through Norman J. Fitzsimmons, a private detective. The loss was confirmed last night, but it is not known on what ship the emeralds were sent. The emeralds were a sift for permission to make the dismissal motion before Justice Wasservogel, who said he doubted if Mr. Steuer had that right. Rickard was indicted on charges arising out of his alleged relations with three young girls.

Mr. Steuer asserted there had been three the Grand Jury and lack of corroboration. Ferdinand Pecora, Assistant District Attorney, who made application that the trial be fixed for March 20, asked the court to refuse Mr. Steuer's manned by the First Battalion at the bombardment of San Juan in the Spanish-American war.

QUATRIEME

What carvings or paintings can compare with the beauty of FINE TAPESTRIES?

history told by a consummate art

"The tale of tapestry carries us back to the unfathomable East...lifts us over a few centuries and throws us into the romance of Gothic days, then trails us along through increasing European civilization up to the great awakening, the Renaissance. Then it loiters in the pleasant ways of the kings of France during the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries."

AU QUATRIEME are fifty tapestries offering a great range of period and design and of size as well as of price. And of the fifty a group of fifteen have been very largely reduced in price.
